Sam Women in politics is our topic today. Before we get into it, today's question. Which country has the highest percentage of women in its parliament? Is it: a) Rwanda b) Sweden c) New Zealand What do you think, Georgina? Georgina I'm not sure. Lucrece Grehoua I think everybody has a politician within them because we all get anger about something but unfortunately when we see it, it's all jargon, it's not very good words that we can understand. Even just as a working class person who hasn't, you know, been to a private school and who's come from a disadvantaged background and so I realised politics is for absolutely everybody, it's just the way that you speak about it has to be tailored to everyone. Sam One of the things she didn't like about politics was the jargon. Book review by Erin Tolley of 100 Questions About Women and Politics, author Manon Tremblay. Author Biography.
