Submission Guidelines. The European Journal of Industrial Relations is the principal English-language forum for the analysis of key developments in European industrial relations and their theoretical and practical implications. It embraces a broad definition of industrial relations and includes articles which relate to any aspect of work and employment. It publishes rigorous and innovative work on and from all European countries. The European Observatory of Working Life (EurWork) offers country profiles on industrial relations and working conditions, regular up-dates on national developments and comparative reports.
