Genealogy Directory John Harris's facsimile pages of Caxton's Chaucer in pen and ink, by Toshiyuki Takamiya of Keio University. John Harris was a master of the short-lived art of pen-and-ink facsimile, which flourished during the 19th-century 'bibliomania' - a term coined by Thomas F. Dibdin for a book which he published in 1809. Dibdin encouraged a passion for books among rich collectors in England and Scotland who acquired incunables and other rare books on an unprecedented scale. Many collectors of the period, not happy with the imperfect condition of a book for which they had paid a large sum of money, wanted to have missing pages supplied in facsimile. He was born on 17 November 1791, in Kensington, into an artistic family. John Harris (18 October 1916 " 7 March 1991) was a British author. He published a series of crime novels featuring the character Inspector Pel, and war books. He wrote with his own name, and also with the pseudonyms of Mark Hebden and Max Hennessy. His 1953 novel The Sea Shall Not Have Them was the basis for a feature film of the same name in 1954. He was the father of Juliet Harris, who published more Inspector Pel books under the name of Juliet Hebden. In 1857, twenty-year old Joseph Harris joins the U.S. Northwest Boundary Commission whose assignment was to define the boundary between the United States and British Canada. As an astronomer and surveyor, he has been trained by the U.S. Coast Survey to use the new Zenith telescope and the new Talcott method of astronomical surveying. In accomplishing this, Harris describes the political difficulties of working with a parallel British Commission, of the outbreak of the "Pig War", and of working with local Native Americans. Anne P. Streeter was born in Chestnut Hill, a suburb of Philadelphia, graduated from Smith College, taught school briefly, then married my husband, Ronald Streeter.
