The Catholicon Anglicum was an English-to-Latin bilingual dictionary compiled in the later 15th century. The Catholicon Anglicum was written in 1483. The author of the Catholicon Anglicum was anonymous at the time of its writing in the 15th century, their true identity remains unknown to the present day. From the dialect of English that they have used, it has been speculated that they might have been a native of Yorkshire in the north of England.
