Liberal arts is the term given to contemporary programmes of education which include areas of study across the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, and the arts. It has its origins in Ancient Greece and began with a "desire for a universal understanding". Simply put liberal arts education aimed at holistic education. Liberal-arts students bring interdisciplinary flair or sometimes just a fresh perspective not yet pigeonholed by post-graduate specialization. Liberal-arts students come from diverse backgrounds and reach beyond their comfort zones to try an eclectic mix of scholarly work. So, generating publication-grade research with students at a liberal-arts college is as much about reflecting on science as one of many distinct ways of knowing as about designing experiments, collecting data, and disseminating that knowledge through publication. The most rewarding faculty-student collaborations for our lab have been experiences that begin and end with space for students and faculty to learn together about science as a culture. The Liberal Arts in Russia (or Rossiiskii Gumanitarnyi Zhurnal) is a scientific journal that was founded by Sotsialno-Gumanitarnoe Znanie publishing house in 2012 and is aimed at developing impartiality and transparency in liberal knowledge and education within academic disciplines, arts and sciences, culture and society in Russia. We invite you to submit original research papers, review articles, short reports for publication in our Journal. All articles are peer-reviewed contributing to their high quality. The Journal is published six times a year.
