Letter from the Right Honorable Edmund Burke to Lord Auckland. My dear Lord,â€” I am perfectly sensible of the very flattering honor you have done me in turning any part of your attention towards a dejected old man, buried in the anticipated grave of a feeble old age, forgetting and forgotten in an obscure and melancholy retreat. The Works of Edmund Burke, plus Burke by John Morley. Rating: 0 out of 5 stars(0/5). Reflections on the Revolution in France by Edmund Burke.Â  By another section of the same act, the same Court of Directors were ordered to take into consideration and to decide on the indeterminate rights of the Rajah of Tanjore and the Nabob of Arcot; and in this, as in the former case, no power of appeal, revision, or alteration was reserved to any other. It was a jurisdiction, in a cause between party and party, given to the Court of Directors specifically.
