

Through the Eyes of a Miner: The Photography of Joseph Divis | Steele Roberts, 2010 | Simon Nathan, Les Wright, Brendon Wilshire | 9781877448942 | 2010

Photographer Joseph Divis (right) and friend above Waiuta. (Image: Simon Nathan). Curiously really modern looking women working the alluvial claims for gold. He says we have to work, work, work, work, work, work. Waiuta mine manager Tas Hogg with miner. (Image: Simon Nathan). Through the Eyes of a Miner: The Photography of Joseph Divis (Friends of Waiuta/Craig Potton Books, $40) by Simon Nathan is available at Unity Books. The Spinoff Review of Books is proudly brought to you by Unity Books, recently named 2020 International Book Store of the Year, London Book Fair, and Creative New Zealand. Visit Unity Books Wellington or Unity Books Auckland online stores today. Czech miner, Joseph Divis, photographed life in New Zealand mining towns Blackball, Waiuta and Waihi, where he lived and worked between 1909 and 1935. Although something of an outsider, Divis loved this country. When he died in 1967 he was one of the last inhabitants of the ghost town of Waiuta, site of one of the richest gold-bearing quartz reefs in New Zealand. Divis used Czech miner, Joseph Divis, photographed life in New Zealand mining towns Blackball, Waiuta and Waihi, where he lived and worked between 1909 and 1935. Although something of an outsider, Divis loved this country. Be the first to ask a question about Through the Eyes of a Miner. Lists with This Book. This book is not yet featured on Listopia. See more of Through the Eyes of a Miner on Facebook. Log In. or. Create New Account. See more of Through the Eyes of a Miner on Facebook. Log In. Forgot account? In my eyes, talking about your problems, and seeking help and guidance remain two of the most important methods of managing mental well-being in this industry, but building resilience is a close third. Resilience is a skill, and like all skills it takes time and practice to improve. Take some time to consider whether you see yourself as resilient or not and whether you think it's something you could work towards building.